Edgar Wind (1900–1971) was a cosmopolitan scholar who made important contributions to many disciplines, including philosophy, Renaissance art history and modern art criticism. This book considers a crucial question: to understand the work of an art historian, how important is it to know their life story? In the case of Edgar Wind, biography and scholarly endeavour are intimately connected. His intellectual exchanges with leading art historians, philosophers and artists of his day were essential for his research. Moreover, his wife, Margaret Wind, was determined to establish an Edgar Wind Archive after his death. This book is the first comprehensive study in English of Wind's intellectual achievements.

By exploring the often hidden ideological agenda(s) of place branding, and analyzing the ways in which practitioners often marginalize, or ignore, local stakeholders on the ground, this volume of essays offers a fresh and topical perspective on an extremely important subject.

By using a unique combination of methods and tools, including sentiment analysis and usage fluctuation analysis, this book sheds light on the interplay between language and socio-economic dynamics, showing how the sentiment of specialized terms in the economic/financial domain fluctuates diachronically following major economic events.

The author analyses the concept of free will in the context of the psychophysical problem. After showing that the contemporary debate between compatibilists and incompatibilists is not of high relevance, he starts his analyses from specifying a solution to the psychophysical problem and then works towards a possible definition of free will.

This volume of "Neuere Lyrik" contains a selection of texts on Latin American poetry that focuses on its encounter – at times direct and dialogic; at times indirect or even oppositional – with foreign texts and traditions. The question it therefore raises is what constitutes the borders – cultural, medial, discursive, linguistic, etc. – of a poetic tradition to begin with, particularly today.

This is the first in-depth study of Spanish artist Juan Muñoz's work in terms of the idea of silence. Drawing on a wealth of documents, this book shows how silence and memory defined and shaped his art, ultimately revealing how his art probes and reanimates the uncanny memory of Spain's traumatic past.

The book is based on the concept of the Tibetan-Yi Corridor, which was proposed by Fei Xiaotong, and "The Intermediaries" Theory from Wang Mingming. It studies the ethnic relations and cultural changes in the western part of the Corridor, which comprised the Di-Qiang ethnic origin.

This book accommodates perspectives across sociology, cultural studies, anthropology, policy studies, and history to offer both a rich and complementary account of sporting culture in Hong Kong's socio-historical context.
